MRS. HAHN GUILTY, GETS CHAIR

Bierly Heads G. O. P. As Fernyak Quits

Gets Chair In Poison Murder

NOMINEE FOR MAYOR TAKES PARTY REINS

Chosen by County Committee After Fernyak Nominates Him as 'Logical Man.'

SOUGHT TO RESIGN BEFORE

Retiring Chairman Explains He Hasn't Necessary Time to Give to Job.

Glenn L. Bierly, unsuccessful Republican mayoralty candidate in last Tuesday's election, today headed the Richland county G. O. P. as chairman of the party's executive committee

He was named unanimously last night in a session at Republican headquarters in the Walpark building when Carlton S. Fernyak finally gave up the post after a previous attempt to resign had failed.

Bierly will serve out Fernyak's term which expires next August. He was nominated by Fernyak as "the logical man to head the party."

Sought to Quit In August.

Fernyak, who has served as head of the executive group for three years, submitted his resignation last August, but the committee then refused to accept it, contending it would not be a wise move for the party to change leaders at the outset of a campaign.

Commenting on the action today Fernyak said "I consented at the previous meeting to see the campaign through and I intend to continue as a member of the committee, but the demands of private business are such that I could not give the necessary time to either job had I remained chairman."

Says Not All Harmony.

Although the majority of the G. O. P. leaders described last night's session as "harmonious," Ralph M Hardy, central committee chairman, had another definition for it.

Understood to have clashed with R. B. Gardner, local G. O. P. leader, over the causes of the Republican defeat in the county in 1936, Hardy said "I believe in placing the blame where it belongs, and in my opinion the cause of it all was the attempt of one or two men to run the party without consulting others who have a right to have a say in the matter."

He declined to name the man or men to whom he referred.

Gardner placed the blame with "a lack of harmony with in party ranks and too much fighting between internal groups."

A discussion about the party's defeat in the last municipal election brought out the almost unanimous opinion that Republicans in the city lacked interest in the campaign and just neglected to vote.

A meeting of the executive group was called for Nov. 19 to discuss re-organization of the party in the county in preparation for the 1938 campaign.

"We intend to start now preparing for the next year's drive and are going to carry our re-organization move into every precinct in the county," Bierly said.

"Recognizing the need for a re-vitalized Republican party, I attempted in my campaign to lay the groundwork for our re-organization plan," he declared, "and it is on that basis of a sound platform and a thorough presentation of issues that we will carry on our plan."

Duke's Talk With King Postpones Visit to U. S.

Brothers Feared Wave of Anti-U. S. Sentiment, Observers Believe.

CABLES ROOSEVELT

Windsor Guided by Labor Protest In Decision to Delay Tour, Claim.

PARIS—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor postponed his visit to the United States after a telephonic consultation with his brother-successor King George VI, it was reported in usually reliable quarters today, over the possibility that British-American relations might be harmed if he went through with his plans.

It was said that after talking the situation over, the royal brothers agreed that a bad reception to the duke by American labor might provoke a wave of anti-American sentiment in Great Britain. This, it was agreed, also according to informants, would be most unfortunate in view of a tense world situation in which Britain and the United States might co-operate.

Next Step Indefinite.

The 70 trunks of the duke and his American born duchess, containing the frocks she had spent weeks in selecting and the new haberdashery and suits which the duke intended to unveil in the United States, stood in the hallway of the Hotel Meurice today while the duke puzzled on where to go from here.

The private car which the French government had put at the duke's disposal was detached from the Bremen boat train this morning at the St. Lazare station—and 20 passengers, mostly newspaper correspondents, cancelled their reservations.

The duke, angry and bewildered over the many diverse factors that had caused him to postpone his visit, was looking for something to do today.

For the present, a spokesman said, the duke and duchess would remain here. Their further plans were unsettled, it was explained But it was expected by persons close to him that he would go back to seclusion in Austria, where he sought refuge during the first lonely months of his exile.

Abandons Industry Study.

Also, it was intimated he would abandon for the present his idea of studying industrial plants and housing, which he had undertaken in hope of fiding an outlet for the impelling nervous energy that characterized him as Prince of Wales and King of Britain.

Those associated with the duke

JURY DECIDES SHE POISONED AGED OHIOAN

Blond German to Be First Woman to Be Executed In Ohio If Appeal Fails.

CALM AS VERDICT'S READ

Lowers Head, Stares at Judge as Jury Foreman Reads Death Penalty Ruling.

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, 31-year-old blond mother, was convicted of first degree murder today in the poison death of Jacob Wagner, 78-year-old gardener. The jury did not recommend mercy, making the death penalty mandatory.

The jurors had spent about two and one-half hours in actual deliberations, since receiving the case last night

Mrs Hahn would be the first woman ever executed in the state of Ohio.

She appeared in the courtroom nervous and distraught, her blond hair dishevelled, and twisted a handkerchief between her fingers.

Calm Over Verdict.

John Granda, lone male member of the jury, read the verdict. As Mrs. Hahn heard the death verdict, she made no move, except to lower her head slightly, and pursed her lips.

Judge Charles S Bell had previously warned the spectators against making any demonstration and dozens of uniformed special guards were stationed about the courtroom to enforce his order.

As Judge Bell thanked the jurors and went through the usual routine for adjournment, Mrs. Hahn looked up and stared fixedly at the jurist

Attorney Polls Jury.

As defense Attorney Hiram C. Boisinger polled each member of the jury Mrs Hahn blinked her reddened eyes at frequent intervals. After the session was adjourned, she was escorted from the courtroom to the elevator which leads to the women's jail quarters where she had been confined since her arrest on Aug. 10

The jury returned to the courtroom once during the morning's deliberations to have read the testimony of two women who said that Mrs. Hahn came to the building where Wagner lived and asked "if any old men resided there"

Mrs Hahn, tried on a charge of fatally poisoning Wagner to obtain his small fortune, was indicted also in the poison death

Italy, Japan, Germany Sign Anti-Red Pact

Protocol Holds Communism Continues to Place World In 'Constant Danger of War'—Italians Classed as Original Signatory of Year-Old Agreement.

ROME—(AP)—Italy joined Japan and Germany today in an accord against communism which their protocol declared "continues to place the civilized world" in the "constant" danger of war.

The protocol stipulated that Italy be considered an original signatory of the nearly year-old German-Japanese pact against the communist international.

The protocol was a short document, giving in a 150-word introductory statement the three powers' reasons for the agreement.

The introduction declared that only by close collaboration of "all states interested in maintaining peace" could the war danger be removed Pays Italy Tribute.

It paid a separate tribute to Italy which "has combatted this danger with an inflexible determination and has eliminated international communism from its territory."

Italy had decided, the introduction went on, to associate herself with Germany and Japan "who on their part are animated by the same will to defend themselves against the communist international."

Four brief articles were appended after the introductory statement, setting forth these clauses:

1. Italy enters the anti-comintern agreement of Nov. 25, 1936.
2. Italy will be considered as a signatory of the original accord.
3. The protocol is made an integral part of the previous accord and its supplementary protocol.
4. The protocol is done in triplicate in Rome.

The new accord was written in Italian, German and Japanese.

The broadened accord contained no military clauses. The agreement, as originally concluded, however, bound the signatories to keep each other informed of international communist activities and to act together on "necessary defense measures."

After the ceremony of signing the triplicate pact at Palazoo Chigi the three powers' representatives went to Palazzo Venezia to give Premier Mussolini formal notification.

Court Considers New Challenge of Black's Selection

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—Eight justices of the supreme court meet in their usual Saturday conference today to discuss, and perhaps decide, whether to grant a petition challenging the constitutional eligibility of the ninth member, Associate Justice Hugo L. Black.

They refused two such petitions last month. During the court's consideration of these Black absented himself from the conference room. It was generally believed he would do likewise today when his colleagues consider the latest challenge.

In announcing the rejection of the previous challenges, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes said that neither of the petitioners had shown sufficient personal interest to demand a judicial review of Black's appointment.

But authors of the latest challenge—attorneys for a group of Florida brokers attacking constitutionality of the Securities Act of 1933—believe they have established that necessary personal interest.

TAKES UP FIRE HOSE PROBLEM

Council Group to Take First Steps to Get Equipment as Result of Breaks at Fire.

City council's finance committee will take up the problem of replacing some of the city's worn out fire hose at a meeting tomorrow as the result of two breaks in hose while firemen were fighting a blaze at a North Main street home Thursday.

Councilman C N. Shultz, a member of the committee, said he planned to meet with Karl Troll, chairman of the committee and Councilman Fred Miller tomorrow to decide on the amount of hose that the city can afford to purchase.

"I am in the hopes that we can reach a decision tomorrow and have the legislation prepared for presentation at the next council meeting," Shultz said

He pointed out that Fire Chief C. J Seeburger had asked for 2,500 feet of hose at a cost of $1,080 but that only a portion of the request could be allowed in view of the city's financial status.

Seeburger said that while his request had called for 2,500 feet of new hose, he could get along with 2,000 feet until the first of the year When the 1938 appropriations are made, the chief said he would be able to purchase the remaining 500 feet

The council action follows the breaking of two sections of hose as firemen extinguished a blaze at the home of Daniel Black, 407 North Main street Thursday.

Calls Loyalty Cappeller's Greatest Trait in Tribute

Loyalty was the chief characteristic of the late William S Cappeller, founder of the Mansfield News, George J. Kochenderfer, editor of The News-Journal said last night in Columbus, on the occasion of Mr. Cappeller's name being placed in Ohio's Journalism Hall of Fame

"Those who were privileged to be associated with him in producing The News, and others who had opportunity to know him well, inclined naturally to give the same loyalty in return," Kochenderfer said.

"It may be said in passing," Kochenderfer continued, "that much of the disturbed employer-employe relationships which appear in industry and business from time to time might be avoided if policies similar to those of W S Cappeller were more generally in vogue"

Kochenderfer's tribute to the memory of Mr. Cappeller traced his life and activities, with emphasis laid on his career in Mansfield where he founded the News, the city's first permanent daily, in 1885, and which he published until his death in 1911.

A special guest at the Hall of Fame meeting was Mrs Burr Gongwer, Cleveland, wife of the prominent Democratic leader, and Mr. Cappeller's daughter.

Also placed in the Hall of Fame was the name of the late John M. Amos, onetime editor of the Cambridge Jeffersonian. The tribute to Mr Amos was given by his son, Harry W. Amos, who succeeded his father as editor of the Jeffersonian

Names of 31 Ohio newspapermen are now on the roster of the Hall of Fame.

The text of the tribute paid the memory of the late W. S. Cappeller by G. J. Kochenderfer will be found on today's editorial page.

MRS. DAVIS ADDRESSES THREE ORGANIZATIONS

Sappho, Conversational, Cosmopolitan Clubs, Hold Joint Meeting to Hear Expert Lecture on Emotional Maturity.

THREE of the city's study clubs, Sappho, Conversational, and Cosmopolitan, met yesterday afternoon at the Women's Club to hear an address by Mrs. W. R. Davis, Chardon, who is associated with Mrs. Gary Cleveland Meyers in the Health and Parent Education association in Cleveland. Mrs. Davis' subject was "Are We Grown Up?"

Discussing the emotional maturity of adults, Mrs. Davis made five points. She stated that an adult has the ability to make a choice and abide by it, to contribute to the constructive and worthwnile activities in the place in which he finds himself, and he has learned to postpone the satisfaction of his intense desires.

At this point Mrs. Davis said, "The American woman is the most indulged in the world." Continuing she pointed out that the emotionally adult individual is capable of making and practicing reflective and suspended judgment and he can think and reason rather than feel. The speaker cited Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Mrs. Grace Coolidge, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt as examples of emotionally mature women.

Mrs. Davis was formerly a professor of child welfare at Kansas State college at Manhattan, Kan., and she is considered a specialist in parent education. She is connected with the Kansas State Board for Vocational Education and at present is the state chairman of the department of education of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs.

Tea was served following the meeting with Mrs. John Finefrock and Mrs. Fred Chamberlain as hostesses.

Style Whimsics.

One of the youthful looking suits presented in the mid-season collection of Lelong in Paris is a navy and white candy striped dress with pleated hem and navy coat with pleated skirt section.

When in doubt buy black clothes. Black is easy to match and never goes out of style. "Stylish" colors die with the seasons.

HELEN HEUSS WEDS ON PARENTS' ANNIVERSARY

Popular Mansfield Girl Chooses Silver Wedding Anniversary for Her Marriage to Floyd K. Adams Friday Night.

ONE of the prettiest weddings of the year was the candlelight service last night at St. Mark's Lutheran church which united in marriage Miss Helen Heuss and Floyd K. Adams. Miss Heuss chose her parents' silver wedding anniversary for her wedding night, and the anniversary theme provided an interesting background for the daughter's wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Heuss, 201 South Mulberry, and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Adams, 55 Woodland avenue.

The church was lighted only with candlelight for the 8:30 service, with seven-branch candelabra at the entrance and sides and the altar lighted with the ritualistic candles of the Lutheran church. The front of the church was banked with greens and fall flowers with mums and pompons predominating.

Oben church was observed. Before the ceremony Miss Thelma Reed played nuptial music and Donald Kirkpatrick sang "All for You." and "I Love You Truly." During the single ring ceremony at which Rev. J. Louis Wolf officiated, Miss Reed softly played "Because" by D'Hardelot; Hofmann's "Poeme du Souvenir;" "Indian Love Call." and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life."

THE bride, one of the prettiest of the year, came in on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage. Her ivory velvet gown fell into a long square train which covered the steps to the altar. Her train-length veil was held to her head with a coronet of velvet and orange blossoms, and had a double shoulder length veil over it.

It's only ornament was a medallion of pearls which held the shirred bodice in place. She also wore the bridegroom's gift, an old gold blacelet with Hematite cameo. Her colonial bouquet was of white roses and gardenias, with velvet ribbon shower.

Her attendants were her sister, Mrs. Harry Oster as matron of honor, and her cousin, Miss Bernice Heuss as her bridesmaid. Their semi-princess gowns of chiffon velvet, were identical, except as to color. Mrs. Oster wore procelain blue velvet and Miss Heuss' gown was in fushia velvet. They carried colonial bouquets in fushia, blue and violet, with velvet ribbons to match their gowns. Smart little evening hats fashioned of velvet bands to match their gowns, with shoulder veils, and shoes of matching shades, completed their ensembles.

William Adams, a brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Barney Adams, another brother and Harry Oster were ushers.

AFTER the ceremony a bridal reception was held at the Heuss home and later onen house observed by Mr. and Mrs. Heuss for their anniversary. The buffet table was arranged for both events, with a bridal cake at one end and a silver anniversary cake at the other, with a centerpiece of mums and poms between them. The bride of 25 years ago received her guests in a gown of black velvet with silver trim and a shoulder corsage of gardenias and silver leaves.

Later in the evening the couple left on a short motor trip. When they return they will be at home to their friends at 199 South Mulberry. The bride's travel ensemble was a dark green, three piece suit with beaver trim. Her shoulderette was an orchid.

Both Mr. Adams and his bride are graduates of Mansfield high school and he attended the Chicago Art Institute. She has been dental assistant to Dr. A. Spreckler, and Mr. Adams is employed at the Empire Steel company.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Belinap, 2 Park drive, left this morning for California where they are planning to spend the winter.

Cat Stands Ground and Routs Dog

By VIRGINIA LEE

YESTERDAY I advised a very gloomy young woman to face life bravely, having faith that if she was determined to overcome the obstacles to happiness she would achieve it.

Walking near my home late yesterday afternoon I saw a jolly little terrier puppy frisking gaily about, and as he turned he found himself face to face with a large, handsome yellow Persian cat. Puss humped up her back and spit at him, but did not fly. The puppy patently was not used to cats and didn't know what it was all about. He stood a moment looking at the cat and then ran away, while puss calmed down.

The cat who doesn't sail up a tree or what have you when a dog appears is a good illustration of the advice I gave the girl whose boy friend jilted her and who felt life was very, very sad. The person who stands his or her ground when danger threatens has the best chance of outwitting it.

Do you remember, or have you read "Three Men in a Boat," by Jerome K. Jerome? It tells of the three men's dog who, one morning when they were out walking, gave a joyous shout and darted after a most disreputable looking cat The cat went on its way, without hurry, until the dog was almost upon her, and then turned around, stood and looked at the dog with an expression which seemed to say, "I beg your pardon, did you want me for anything?" (I am not quoting exactly.) The dog eyed the cat for a moment and then slunk back to his master with his tail between his legs and apparently muttering apologies.

A cat facing and routing its natural and deadly enemy, the dog, by merely standing its ground, is typical of the attitude we all should take when peril threatens us. We MAY not be able to overcome it. (Cats do not always rout dogs when they stand their ground.) But we can make a good try, and if we are bowled over by it for the time being, we can usually pick ourselves up and go on, saying "better luck next time," and "we're not licked yet!"

Blonde Hair Requires Much Care

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

NO BLONDE who has any sense could want to possess hair that is dry, brittle and like so much straw to the touch. Yet frequent shampoos have a tendency to put hair in just such a condition. They are apt to remove too much of the natural oil from the hair.

If you have light hair and feel that to keep it in presentable condition you must shampoo it frequently, by all means intersperse an oil treatment or two among your regular shampoos. For such treatments help to counteract the drying effects of frequent soap and water applications.

The method of administering such oil treatments is very simple, and if you want a thick, luxuriant head of hair, by all means use them. They'll do your hair no end of good!

If you do go in for healthful hot oil treatments, however, do not follow the treatments by a haphazard shampoo. For if you do, I'm pretty certain that you'll be writing in and complaining that you will find it difficult to remove all the oil from your hair, and there is nothing more apt to detract from one's loveliness than hair that is sticky and oily.

How to Give Shampoo.

Just to be sure that you obtain the most satisfactory results at the first trial, I'm going to tell you just how to shampoo your hair after such a beneficial oil treatment. In the first place, don't wet your hair with hot water before doing the shampooing. Apply a good, liquid shampoo to your hair first, and raise a rich lather with your fingertips.

Then rinse your hair with lukewarm water, repeat the lathering and rinsing, and continue this procedure until all the oil has been removed. And as the final step, use a lemon rinse or a rinse composed of a pint of warm water and two teaspoons of baking soda, in order to remove any least vestige of the oil and to make your hair soft silky and fluffy.

CHOCOLATE CAKE—One teaspoon vanilla, four squares chocolate; one and one-half cups sugar, one and three-fourths cups milk; one-half cup shortening, two eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon baking soda, three teaspoons baking powder, two cups cake flour. The best results are obtained when the ingredients are mixed in the following way: Put the four squares of chocolate and one-half cup of the sugar with three-fourths cup of milk in a saucepan and cook until it is smooth and creamy. Let that mixture cool. Now cream one-half cup of shortening with one cup of sugar. Add the yolks of two eggs beaten until light. Sift the cake flour with salt, baking soda and baking powder. Add to the mixture alternately with the left-over cup of milk, beating well between each addition. Now add the chocolate mixture and beat again. Flavor with vanilla and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in two layers at 350 degrees.

Cabbage used for salad is more tender if shredded fine and put into cold water for 30 minutes, then drained and wrapped in a towel until ready to use.

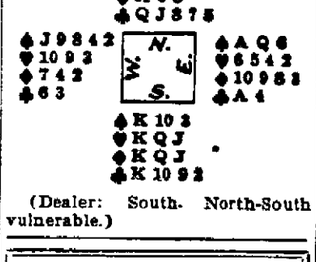
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

PREVENTING A HOLDUP

A VERY DESIRABLE holding to possess in the suit led against no trump by your partner consists of three cards headed by the ace and queen. If you play the ace on the first trick, the declarer with the king can afford safely to hold up until the third round. But if you play the queen on the opening trick, he is afraid to hold up, for fear that the ace may be at his left and will kill off his king. That queen play is particularly valuable if you hold a positive winner in some other suit as you are then able to lay down your ace for the second trick in the original suit and put your partner back in with your remaining card.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

South's opening bid on this deal was 1-No Trump, North bid 3-Clubs and South 3-No Trumps.

When the spade 4 was led against this contract, West played the spade A and returned the Q. South allowed this to hold and won the third round with the K. South was fortunate in finding the club A in the East hand and therefore lost only two spades and a club.

East could have prevented South from making his contract by playing the Q on the first round of spades. South then would have been in the position of deciding whether to win with the king or take the chance of not winning any tricks at all in that suit if it developed that West's lead had been from the A-J-10. The winning of the first spade trick would have defeated South, as when East then won the club, we would have cashed the spade A and led his last spade to West.

Monday's Problem.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

What play by South enables him to make his contract of 6-Hearts after the lead of the diamond Q?

Today's Recipes.

ECONOMY DATE BREAD — One package dates, cut fine; one teaspoon soda, one cup boiling water, one cup dark brown sugar, one tablespoon (generous) shortening, one teaspoon vanilla, two cups flour. Pour boiling water with soda over dates and shortening. When cool add other ingredients in order and beat well.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Nov. 7.

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE, although holding testimony of active and worthy adventures in mystical, occult, cultural or literary pursuits, in other directions holds a menace of sinister, subtle and frustrating circumstances, with sudden disruptions, problems and other adverse situations. These should be met with calmness and discretion rather than tumult and impetuosity.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a rather lively year and, in many ways, a progressive and satisfactory one. Nevertheless, there are frustrations, anxieties and sudden dilemmas to be handled with discretion ad deliberation.

A child born on this day may have talent and energy, but may be easily discouraged, depressed and difficult. It may be restless and changeable if not properly directed.

For Monday, Nov. 8.

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is a most progressive and prosperous one, with auguries of sudden, high-powered and probably sensational developments. Abrupt and startling visitations or strenuous activities in the launching of new projects or in introducing innovations in employment are in order, but all lead to high satisfactions, exciting adventurese and profitable conclusions.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a memorable year, with the sudden precipitation of events which will have an outstanding influence in fashioning the future fortunes. Many exciting and decisive activities are devoted to launching new and perhaps startling projects or to novel improvements in employment.

A child born on this day may have many unusual creative talents with heightened energies and faculties that may bring it success in employment or conspicuous places in the development of new, original and spectacular inventions or projects Adventure, travel and romance mark its career.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"THE OTHER exception?" Dicky repeated in puzzled fashion after my father. "I did not know that anyone beside that man who went overboard with me was missing. I thought that all those who were not killed were taken prisoners on that night when old Phil's rescue of royalty would have been a fiasco—indeed, a tragedy—but for you."

My father gave me an oddly hesitant look, then he said slowly:

"I hoped I wouldn't have to tell you this, but there was one man who escaped, though wounded. How he managed it, we do not know exactly. Because of his wounds, he was not put in irons, and he was given a powerful sedative which apparently took effect. But he must have managed, wounded as he was, to spill the sedative, or substitute water for it, or in some ingenious way to spoil its effect.

Escaped Overboard.

"At any rate, he was in his bunk on board the captured vessel a half hour before its docking, when a guard looked at him. But when they came to remove him from the ship he was gone That he jumped overboard seems certain, for every cranny of the ship was searched as soon as he was missed. Whether he was drowned or managed to reach shore is a question as yet unsolved. Dead or alive, he has vanished into silence and mystery."

"Father!" I faltered, for his introductory sentence was haunting me.

"Yes, Dear?"

"Why did you hope you wouldn't have to tell us about this man? Do we know him?"

"Yes."

"Jack Leslie!" The name burst simultaneously from Dicky's lips and from mine, for the man who had so threatened Mary's happiness was the only one we had known on that craft.

Admits It Was Leslie.

"Yes, Jack Leslie; and I would rather have lost any other prisoner on board. If his death were a certainty, I wouldn't be uneasy, but with him at large, anything can happen."

Dicky gave him an amazed look

"What, the capering cockroach!" he said, and I knew that the contemptuous epithet he had applied to Jack Leslie when he first came into our lives still summed up his opinion of the wastrel

"He was dangerous where Noel and Mary were concerned," Dicky went on, "just as any poisonous insect or snake is dangerous. But I cannot imagine him being an international menace."

But he is, nevertheless," my father said earnestly. "Anyone who underestimates him makes a serious mistake Whether he always has possessed this capacity for infinite evil and for clever, if slimy intrigue, or whether it has been developed in him by his criminal career, I do not pretend to know. But I am positive on these points. He is a dangerous menace, he is at large; and if those emeralds are not found on board the erstwhile boat of the conspirators he has them."

He paused, and I had the sensation of something held back for the moment while he debated the advisability of telling us about it.

On Jewel Trail?

"And if he hasn't them in his possession now," he went on at last, "he knows about them and is on their trail. They are worth literally a queen's ransom, and, what is more, are well worth the attention and co-operation of the big string jewel thieves with whom Jack Leslie is indubitably connected."

I put my hand to my throat with an involuntary gesture, for I felt suddenly as if I were choking. My father bent toward me with sudden contrition in his face

"I knew I should not have frightened you with this, my Darling," he said, and my body stiffened at the spur.

"I am not frightened, except for you," I said steadily. "If Jack Leslie is on the track of those jewels, it follows that you are on his trail, and that means danger for you."

"You are not very complimentary, my Child," he said, with a trace of mischief in his eyes and smile. "I am conceited enough to think I can hold my own against Jack Leslie. Will you pardon me while I put through a call long distance? I must set certain machinery in motion without delay."

THEATER

THERE are so many funny quirks in the making of movies that the layman never hears about. In Edward G Robinson's new picture, which is an adaption of Damon Runyon's "A Slight Case of Murder," Bobby Jordon, who played the tough "Angel" in "Dead End," is supposed to be a beer tester. Every time he opens a bottle of beer it costs Warner Brothers $1.50. There is a strict California law forbidding minors to drink beer, and there is no substitute for beer that will hold a "head" So the director asked for two cases of near beer, and the brewery that made it had to freeze the alcohol out of it as it did in prohibition days. For this special work the brewer charged $72 for two cases, or $1 50 a bottle.

"Ali Baba."

Eddie Cantor as usual surrounds himself with an army of pretty girls in "Ali Baba Goes to Town," his new picture which will be introduced to Mansfield at a midnight matinee tonight at the Ohio theater. The plot is typical of Cantor pictures—the little popeyed comedian stumbles onto a movie company on location, gets a job as an extra goes to sleep and dreams he is back in Bagdad where he is hailed as the immortal son of Ali Baba. It presents opportunity to introduce scenes of Arabian Nights splendor. Handsome Tony Martin and June Lang introduce the proper romantic theme and Louise Hovick (Gypsy Rose Lee) is an intriguing "menace" Roland Young is a featured player and John Carradine, Virginia Field, Alan Dinehart and Douglas Dumbrille are seen in support.

"That Certain Woman."

Bette Davis, who may always be depended upon for an excellent performance, no matter what the picture is, is the feminine star of "That Certain Woman," with Henry Fonda as her co-star. The story is that of a ganster's moll of yesterday, who four years after her husband's death finds that a come back isn't as easy as she thought, and she is dragged across the front page again. Each time that she thinks she has found security through some man's devotion, she finds the phantom of her past interfering. In the cast are Ian Hunter, who cared enough for her to secure her future financially; Anita Louise who took her second husband; Donald Crisp, Hugh O'Connell, Katherine Alexander, and Sidney Toler. The picture opens at the Madison Sunday and runs through Tuesday.

The passion for amateur photography clutches Flash Casey (Eric Linden) in the feature which the Majestic offers the first two days of the week, and results in his landing a job on a newspaper as a cameraman. There are a lot of ups and downs to the business, but in the long run he manages to get pictures at just the right time to change his destiny. One was when he snapped the picture of the publisher's son kissing the pretty French chorus girl; another was snapping the publisher and a pretty girl at a wedding; and the other was a candid camera shot of a gangster's car. Boots Mallory plays opposite Linden. The other feature is "Paid To Dance" with Don Terry and Jacqueline Wells.

"Varsity Show."

SUGGESTS PLAN FOR DESIGN OF SUBDIVISIONS

FHA Proposals Favored By Developers of Sites For Residential Areas.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Many developers are accepting the suggestion of the Federal Housing Administration and establishing architectural committees to control the design and construction of houses built in new subdivisions.

Of the various methods of control, this is the most effective, in the opinion of Howard P. Vermilya, Director of the Technical Division of the Federal Housing Administration. He points out that high priced subdivisions have been utilizing this method for a number of years and that the same method may be satisfactorily applied to lower-priced developments devoted to small homes.

Qualified Group.

These committees include competent architects, contractors, building engineers, or other qualified individuals. It is the duty of these groups to approve the plan and design of all homes before they are built in the subdivision. In this way an attractive and harmonious neighborhood is assured.

Before the Federal Housing Administration will insure a mortgage on a property it must be assured of certain restrictions which will protect the neighborhood against encroachments which would result in the deterioration of the area. The restriction of houses to certain price limits or the specification of a general type of house with a minimum of floor area or size has been a frequent practice, Mr. Vermilya says, but developers are increasingly accepting the advantages of an architectural control committee.

One of the outstanding features of this method, Vermilya explains, is the fact that it can adapt itself to changes in conditions during the years, whereas the other types of restrictions, particularly where they are too high, may stifle the development of the area.

BATHROOM COLOR

When planning the color scheme for your bathroom, first shop for a showed curtain that appeals to you. Then let the color you select for the curtain become the keynote of your color scheme. Paint the walls in a light contrasting tint, trimming the woodwork and enameling the floor (if it is of wood or lineleum)—in strong accent colors.

PAINTING GUTTERS

With winter ahead, it is wise to examine the condition of gutters and downspouts. If gutters are not well cleaned and painted, they will soon begin to decay and when they leak they help decay the woodwork of the structure, soon making expensive repairs necessary.

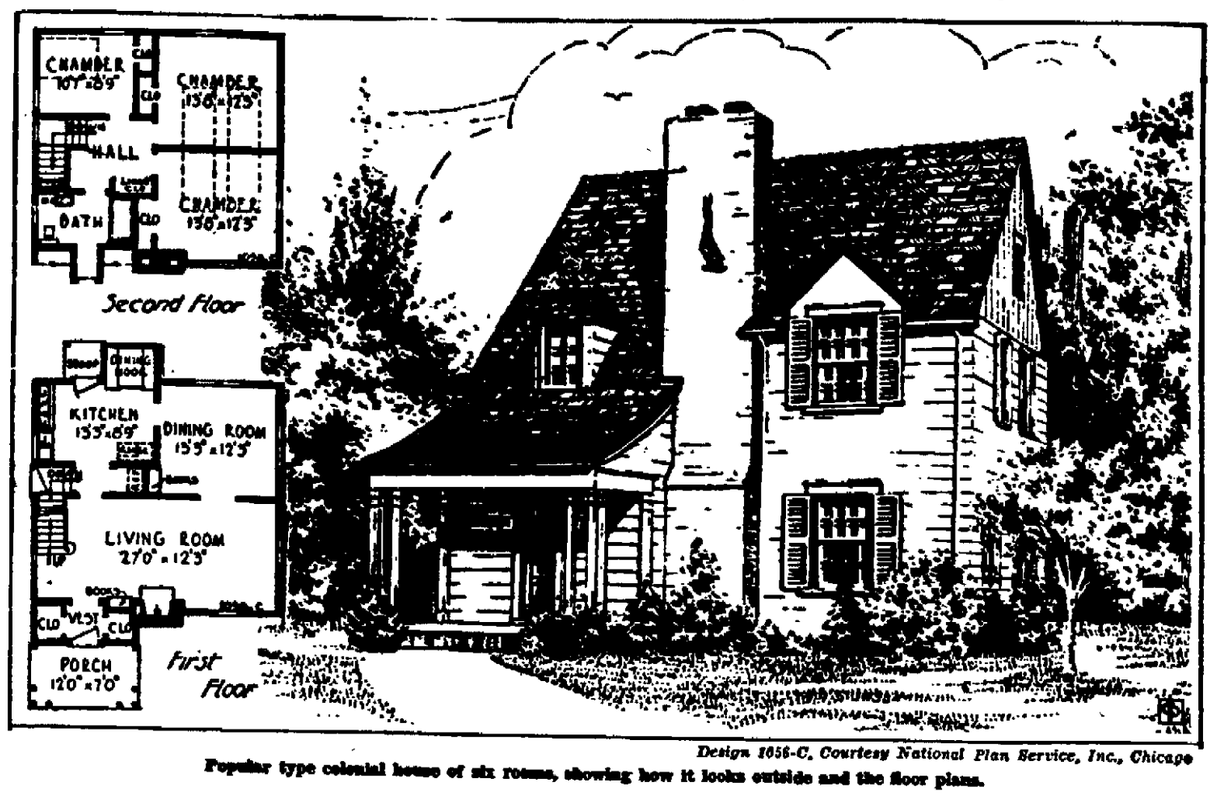
Home In Colonial Architecture Satisfies



Design 1056-C, Courtesy National Plan Service, Inc., Chicago

Popular type colonial house of six rooms, showing how it looks outside and the floor plans.

By CENTRAL PRESS

This little house which is in a popular colonial type of architecture, presents a cozy home atmosphere. This is a type that wears well, and is always in good taste.

The living room is unusually large, with a fireplace and built-in bookcase. You enter it from a small vestibule that contains two coat closets.

A dining room and kitchen occupy the back part of the house on the first floor, with a small dining nook overlooking the garden.

Upstairs there are three nice bedrooms, bath, linen and clothes closets.

The dimensions are: size of main building, 28 by 26 feet; size over all, 29 feet three inches by 42 feet five inches; total cubage, 20,840 cubic feet.

FAMILY NEEDS BUYING GUIDE

Purchaser Should Check House For Individual Requirements, Federal Bureau Says.

WASHINGTON—When considering the purchase of a home, there are questions which the prospective buyer should ask himself. The Federal Housing administration insures mortgages for the purchase of homes when the property meets certain requirements of construction and neighborhood standards, but the individual needs of the family must be considered by the purchaser himself.

Is there much or little waste floor space? Are the rooms arranged so as to provide ease of circulation and privacy? Are rooms of adequate size and shape for their intended purposes? Are wall spaces of such size and location, and are doors, windows, and radiators arranged so that suitable furniture may be conveniently placed? Has the interior planning been accomplished so that fullest advantage has been taken of preferable exposures and has ample natural light and ventilation been provided? Are the grounds so arranged as to contribute to real living?

Another important aspect is the degree of adequacy and durability of the mechanical and convenience equipment.

AIR VALVE MUST OPERATE FREELY

If a steam, vacuum, or hot-water heating plant is to give a maximum of efficiency, free-breathing air valves are necessary. To insure the best performance of a heating system, inefficient valves should be replaced as soon as they do not function properly.

When an air valve does not work freely, the retarded action will slow down the venting of the air and the radiator will heat too slowly. When the valve is clogged no amount of fuel will heat the radiator.

If the valve is a float type and is sticking, it should be cleaned.

PAINT—FOR BARNS AND LIPS

The Department of Commerce has reported that the paint consumed annually in the United States would cover a fence 500 feet high entirely encircling the earth. The amount of lipstick used each year by American women would paint 40,000 barns.

'HOME OF THE MONTH' TO BE FINISHED IN MANSFIELD SOON

Mansfield residents will be given an opportunity soon to inspect one of the houses built under the "Home Of The Month" plan. The home is being built on South boulevards by Edward Schmitt, Mansfield contractor.

"There are two new principles in the house itself," said Schmitt, in explaining the plan.

"The first principle is livability—the second is that the house can actually grow with the family. The house is designed by McCalbe, Home of the Month Bureau, from ideas suggested by builders and architects all over the country—ideas for modern homes for modest purses. The floor plan is the start feature of the design because the floor plan is laid out for modern comfortable living, and the house is designed around it. Therefore, whatever the style of the exterior or the interior decoration, and whatever personal ideas the owner wants to incorporate, he can always be sure of the livability of the house.

"The new house puts Mansfield right up in front with the leading communities which have enlisted in a real nationwide home-building campaign to produce homes for the modern way of living. Previous homes of the month in other cities have been visited by nearly half a million people, which proves that the people of the country are ready and anxious for new homes. They do not want pre-depression designs, because they have discovered that while their ways of living have been changing progressive architects and builders have been developing new home designs to fit them.

"That is why the new 'Home of the Month' is the very embodiment of livability. It has been selected by an outstanding national committee of experts from designs worked out from actually built successful homes in all parts of the country. The committee on the 'Home of the Month' represent sthe National Association of Real Estate Boards and McCall's magazine."

AN INVESTMENT

The good neighbor realizes that a home not kept well painted and in good condition—or a home with a decorative treatment that does not harmonize with nearby homes—can mar the attractiveness of the entire community, lower its property values and its income from rentals.

40,000 BARNS

It has been estimated by statisticians that the amount of lipstick used each year by American women would paint forty thousand barns bright red.

APPRAISAL WORK BY FHA GIVES UNBIASED VALUATION FIGURES

Appraisals and valuations made by Federal Housing administration representatives differ from those in use by made lending institutions in that they involve the carefully coordinated work of several men, each well trained in the particular field in which he operates according to Housing Administrator Steward McDonald.

Continued trainin gof the Housing administration technical personnel is necessary in order that appraisals in one section of the country shall conform closely to those in other parts. These high standards of appraisal have made insured mortgages readily salable in the open market, with $102,000,000 in such transactions involving 860 purchasing institutions in every part of the country, having been negotiated up to June 30 this year.

With most lending institutions unable to afford the expenses of large staffs of expert appraisers and valuators, many now depend upon the unbiased and unprejudiced report of the Housing administration in such matters, Administrator McDonald reports.

NEW ELEVATORS FOR INVALIDS

Miniature elevators are being made by a number of manufacturers these days for the home. They are made in the form of a chair and operate on a track on one side of the regular staidcase.

The family with an invalided member can include this equipment when a new home is being built, or it may be installed after the house is completed.

Rams Wallop Loudonville, 19-0, to Remain Unbeaten

Harmon Sprints 62 and 50 Yards as Madison Wins Fourth Straight Mid-State Victory—Halt Red Bird Threat on Yard Stripe.

By CHARLES MARTIN

Madison high's undefeated and untied grid juggernaut registered its fourth straight Mid-State league triumph Friday by smothering a fighting Red Bird pigskin aggregation, 19 to 0, in the mud at Loudonville before the largest crowd of the season.

Gene Harmon, backfield ace, was the spearhead of the Rams' attack as he galloped 62 and 50 yards for two of the touchdowns. He also heaved a pass to Bill Wilkins for the other marker.

Coach Al Fendrick's green-uniformed combine encountered its stiffest competition in league play, but three beautifully executed plays in the third stanza turned the tide for the defending champions.

Lacked Power.

Loudonville displayed considerable punch throughout, but failed to produce the needed power to push over a touchdown.

The Red Birds marked up nine first downs to Madison's three, but only once did they penetrate inside the Rams' 10. Loudonville accounted for seven of its first downs in the second half after Madison had gained its commanding lead.

The Red-Shirted gridders marched deep into Madison territory against the reserves in the fourth chapter, but Fendrick rushed his regulars into the game and Loudonville lost the ball on the one-yard stripe.

Madison chalked up two of its first downs in the opening period, but was unable to accomplish anything.

Three Quick Thrusts.

Going into the second half, the Rams made three quick thrusts to put the game on ice.

Taking the kickoff on their own 35, the Rams, with the aid of a 15-yard roughing penalty, marched to the Loudonville 46. On the first play Harmon fired a pass that Wilkins caught over his shoulder on the 18 and raced into "pay dirt." Harmon added the extra point on a line plunge.

After an exchange of punts, Madison took the oval in midfield. On the first play Harmon skirted his right end and raced down the sidelines for the score. Joe Miller's kick for the point was blocked by Carter.

The final touchdown was the result of Harmon's brilliant 62-yard broken field run. The Rams took a Red Bird punt on their own 31, and after two line plays put the ball on the 38. Harmon went through right tackle, reversed his field and scored standing up. Doug DeNero's plunge for the point failed.

Bill Wilkins' brilliant defensive play was an outstanding feature of the tilt. He continually rushed the Loudonville passers and was a stone wall against the Buds' running plays.

Carter, Red Bird fullback, was the principal offensive threat against the Rams. His punting was a big factor in keeping Madison away from the Loudies' goal.

Victory Cost Jackets Services of Dwight Bumpus.

MT. VERNON—The Yellow Jackets of Mt. Vernon high pushed over touchdowns in the opening half here Friday night to edge a fighting Wooster combine, 12 to 6, in a non-conference grid tilt.

The triumph was a costly one for the Jackets as they lost the services of Dwight Bumpus, leading North Central Ohio conference scorer, for the balance of the season. He suffered a dislocated shoulder in the first half.

Mt. Vernon accounted for a marker in the opening quarter on a blocked punt, and added the second on a pass.

Wooster came through with its score in the fading minutes of the final chapter when Kate tossed a long pass to Robinson in the end zone.

Hull broke through to block a Wooster punt on the visitors' 12, and after the ball rolled into the end zone, Conkle fell on it for the score.

Touchdown No. 2 was scored by Hull who grabbed a short pass from Schlosser, sub for Bumpus. Neither club was able to convert the extra point. Mt. Vernon registered 13 first downs to Wooster's two.

ENJOYING SUCCESS

Sportswoman Leads With 7 Blue Winners.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Mrs. Loula Long Combs of Kansas City, Mo., has been sending horses to the national horse show off and on for nearly 30 years but seldom has she enjoyed better success than at the current equine blue-blood exhibition in Madison Square Garden.

With five days still to go, the matronly mid-western sportswoman leads the field with seven blue ribbons and appears well on the way to carrying off the honors won by Frances Dodge of Rochester, Mich., last year. Only three times have her fine harness horses failed to win and then they finished in the money.

The surprise last night was the victory turned in by the Canadian army team, rated an outsider at the start of the international military competition. The Canadians came from second place to take the three-night battle for the low score trophy by a margin of one point over the United States. The latter had led through the first two tests. The Belgians finished third, the Irish fourth, and The Netherlands last.

Today's military competition brought the officers into action in quest of the Bowman challenge cup.

The Mansfield Reserves chalked up another grid victory at Stadium field Friday when the defeated Centerburg high 12 to 0.

Mansfield struck through the air to account for both markers. Russell crossed the goal first by galloping 20 yards after taking Ike Smith's long pass. LeMunyon fired a pass to Condon who lateraled to Duncan for the record touchdown.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE.

SALT LAKE CITY — (UP) — Football's effect on what anthropologists know as the human beingus Americanus is the same all over the country. No matter where you go the day of a big game finds the citizens displaying the identical emotions.

I concluded this by the behaviour of Salt Lake City and environs under the severe nervous pressure of the tiff between Colorado's Buffaloes and Utah's Redskins. The Buffaloes and the Redskins, football enemies over a long span of years, will have at one another today, and the only person in this town who has failed to show excitement is Brigham Young, who is cast in bronze at the top of Main street.

This tremendous interest in the game is more than a little surprising to a man who has lived in the east so long his ankles are chafed from wearing spats, and who thinks the Hudson not the Mississippi, is the Father of Waters.

Last night and today Salt Lake City offered the technically correct football scene. There were just the proper and official number of rooters who had looked on the grape at its fermented best—or worst. And they bellowed just the proper unintelligible noises. The hotel lobbies were jammed just to the proper point of suffocation, and the sidewalks and streets were beautifully unnavigable.

And, from what I can learn, the football is the same, too. I mean the boys out here play the game just as well and just as vigorously as they do in the more highly publicized areas. It has long been a habit of the experts, when it came time to name the All-America players and nominate the various teams for the various bowls to make a non-stop hop from the Big Ten right on to the Pacific Coast, thus completely ignoring the Rocky Mountain conference.

This is a mistake and you need only to make a quick study of the roster of the professional teams to be convinced. Headed by the one and only Dutch Clark, the Rocky Mountain district has no fewer than fifteen or twenty players performing and performing well, in the toughest football league of them all.

Colorado today will use a quarterback, Byron "Whizzer" White—whose record is a brilliant one. It is entirely possible he may be the best all-around back in the country. But All-Americans are made by publicity and Colorado's publicity budget for all sports, from swimming to track, is $700 a year. I can name you a dozen schools who spend that much each year on imported cigarets for their publicity men.

Eyston Trys For Record

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah—(UP)—Capt. George E. T. Eyston's mechanical monster called Thunderbolt was rolled out onto the hard-packed salt track for an attempt to break the world's land speed record today.

The British racer and his crew of mechanics were confident that the Thunderbolt was the fastest machine ever built for land and they predicted a new record would be set at somewhere between 310 and 330 miles an hour. Estimates of the machine's possible speed ranged as high as 350 miles per hour.

The present record is Sir Malcolm Campbell's 301.13 miles an hour.

On October 20 Capt. Eyston drove straightaway here at 309.6 miles an hour and the throttle wasn't wide open. Then the clutch broke and he was unable to make the return run within an hour which is required for establishing a record. The average of the two trips over the measured mile is the speed listed in the record books.

WHERE GRIDDERS LEARN

If you've been wondering where all that Southwest conference grid talent comes from, maybe this will help. Twelve thousand schoolboys play in the Texas interscholarstic football league annually.

BETTER THAN DON LASH

W. O. Spencer, Mississippi State track coach, thinks Durwood Thompson, a freshman miler from Columbus, Miss., should be a greater runner than Don Lash, because he has a better physique and just as much stamina.

MANSFIELD TRUCK OWNERS NEEDED IT— White BUILT IT!

Local truck operators need the kind of a truck that White is now building. A sturdy truck capable of standing the gaff of real truck operation, not a converted passenger car. A high quality, balanced engineering job, but at a low price. The new White is all that and MORE. See it today and you'll agree, it's the stand-out value of the industry.

Galion Cinches Tie For N. C. O. Crown

Scores Lone Touchdown In Opening Period to Hand Marion Presidents 7 to 0 Defeat Before 4,000 at Heise Park.

GALION—Coach Bob Corry's Galion Orangemen assured themselves of at least a tie for the North Central Ohio conference championship here Friday night by edging a stubborn Marion Harding club, 7 to 0, before a crowd estimated at 4,000 at Heise athletic field.

Galion, unbeaten and untied in the league race, can annex the conference crown next week by turning back the Shelby Whippets in its final N. C. O. game.

Galion's tally came in the closing minutes of the first period after a series of line plunges put the ball on the 11-yard stripe. Durtschi, Galion right half, went through his own left tackle into "pay dirt." Pangallo kicked the extra point from placement.

Neither team threatened seriously during the second period, play being mostly in midfield as both teams strove desperately to keep each other from scoring.

A surprisingly new team faced the Corry proteges as they squared off at each other at the beginning of the third period. The Presidents possessed new vigor, and with grim determination set out to cross the Galion goal, but were stopped after they drove to the 20-yard marker.

Galion took command of the oval early in the final period and succeeded in driving deep in Harding territory, only to lose the ball on downs as the Presidents' defense stiffened.

The Harding gridsters put on a final desperate drive to the Galion goal with a smooth performing aerial attack that placed the ball on the Galion one-yard marker.

Zeisler made three futile attempts to drive the final yard but was halted on the one-yard line.

Galion used one line play that brought the pigskin to their own three as the fourth period closed, giving Galion the victory. Marion's President chalked up 10 first downs to Galion's nine.

The victory here last night gave Galion its first N. C. O. title contender since 1927.—By Howard Allen.

Johnson Celebrates Fiftieth Birthday.

WASHINGTON — (AP)—Walter Johnson, who as a gangling Idaho rookie wouldn't risk a big league baseball trial here unless guaranteed a return ticket, will celebrate his 50th birthday anniversary tonight at a dinner given by 430 admirers.

It has been 30 years since Johnson made his Washington debut—and was bunted out of the park. That was the beginning of a 21-year career in which he overcame the handicap of a losing team and made records that placed him high in baseball's hall of fame.

THE STATE vs. ELNA JEPSON

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

(Copyright 1937)

SYNOPSIS

Just as Elna Jepson, the "Enigma Woman," feels she is about to "break" and so fulfill the prediction of a hostile press, the judge adjourns her trial for murder. She has been about to plead guilty, get the maddening thing over, regardless of the facts in the case. Rob Jamieson, her kindly jailer, sensing her state of mind, says she must not do what she is considering. Just then appears Curtis Graham, a childhood friend, and her first jail visitor. Absent on business, he had seen a newspaper story predicting her "break." When she asks if he believes her guilty, he says he cannot. She accepts a "defense fund" when he tells her that her father, Oscar Jepson, noted architect, paid his way through college. She says the story she must tell the jury is a lie but that she must pursue the course she laid out for herself like a true Jepson. She recalls her father's disregard of public opinion and how when he died she respected his wish that there be no funeral services or eulogies. Then she found herself with only fifty cents and their joint bank account tied up. Curtis has tried to help her and wants to marry her to care for her. She receives a letter from Roger Ainsworth, a young lawyer, saying his father, Jepson's old friend, has turned the Jepson family affairs over to him and that if she comes to see him she can probably release her bank account. She remembers Roger vaguely as having been at the Jepson home to play bridge.

CHAPTER VIII.

Elna leaped from the bed and put on her red hat again. Yes, Roger Ainsworth would even understand the red hat. He would know what her father wanted, and why. Fifty cents' worth of gas—her last fifty cents—would take her to his office.

Almost gaily she entered that office a few minutes later. The man whose features she had vaguely remembered were suddenly clear and familiar. The impersonality of Roger's gesture to a chair was balm to her bruised spirit. Bewilderment and strain dropped away from her. The bank teller, the reporters, her indignant relatives, even Curtis with his head buried in her lap asking her to marry him, let him take care of her, ceased to exist.

She knew at last exactly what she wanted. This man, with his dark, aquiline, reserved features, the hint of premature gray in his black hair, belonged among the strong ones, like her father. He would not question nor urge.

He unobtrusively pushed a leather box of cigarets across the desk to her. "Smoke?"

"Thanks." She lighted a cigaret with steady fingers, faintly surprised at their steadiness.

"My father," he said, "turned your affairs over to me—subject, of course, to your wishes."

Her dark eyes lifted, flashed him a smile of gratitude. His compressed lips relaxed in an answering smile.

"I know what I want to do," she said on the upward wave of that sudden release of spirit. "But I don't know beans about law or business. Have you done anything—yet?"

"Quite a lot." Was it sunshine or laughter that made the severe room momentarily bright? "I've appointed myself your attorney without your permission. I took your father's will to the president of your bank and got your account released. The president has been a friend of my dad's since before I can remember. I could show him the power of attorney."

"Oh!" With a gentle sigh of relief, Elna leaned back in her chair. Here was some one who had known exactly what to do, while she had strained and blundered. "Thank you, you did quite right." The words were formal, but every word that passed between them seemed charged with significance.

"Now what is it you want to do? I can turn all this directly over to you, of course." For the first time, as he tapped it, she noticed the shiny black safety deposit box on his desk. But she ignored the gesture.

"First of all. I want to go straight back to work in the laboratory. You can't wallow around in hysterics when you're busy with retorts and test tubes. That's not our end of it, of course. I'm just ticking things off. I'm glad you did exactly what Father wanted—for him. I—they—."

"Oh. I didn't know Mr. Jepson well enough to be psychic about him," Roger interrupted. "The fund and the directions were specific. He thought you might be—swayed by others."

"I wasn't." The words were like a banner held high. Rare color flamed across her face. The one thing she had ever cared about with an intensity that blotted out all else—"You handled that well, chit"—she could almost hear her father's voice. But it was another voice, saying the same thing in different words.

"Good girl," said Roger with no further comment. That was the way Oscar Jepson said things. "What else do you want?"

"I want to get rid of the house. I want to live alone in an apartment. Can that be done?"

Not to this man nor to any one could she tell how she longed to be free of memories. Not to him, nor to anyone, could she reveal that scene by the gate with her mother—just before her mother took her own life.

"The deed to the house is in your name," Roger said. "It is here." Again he tapped the safety deposit box. "It is a 'Jepson house,' you know. It's a sort of museum piece. It may take time to dispose of it."

"Then I can't afford to move?"

"I didn't say that." Again came that electric flash between them, this time of anger, but cleansing anger. "My father handled your father's investments. I can't take that responsibility without consulting you at each point. That is up to you. Your bonds are safe, but they do not yield enough income for you to live on. There's insurance, too, but you ought to hang on to that for an emergency. By the way, I think I can wangle you out of putting your father's estate through probate. It would save you quite a lot of time and money. Everything was left in your name. That will help."

"I'm not talking about bonds and probate, whatever that it," Elna began quietly enough, but she found herself on her feet, gloves twisting in her slim fingers, her face aflame to the tip of her scarlet hat. "That's your business. Go ahead and manage it. I'm a scientist, not a lawyer. Take whatever commission you like. I ask you just one question: Can I move to an apartment? Please answer it."

"Keep your hat on." Roger's calm efficiency doused her fire. "If you want me to act for you, I'll do it, of course. Furnished or unfurnished?"

"I don't know." The old childlike bewilderment submerged her again.

"I'll take you. It's Saturday afternoon and time to quit anyway. Have a look at the Hillcrest. You've enough money to put in some stuff of your own, if you wish. This is plain busines, you know. But if I take care of your affair, I'll have to talk to you about them. Agreed?"

"Why, certainly." Elna admired his efficiency, his forward look which settled problems. She followed him with unaccustomed meekness. She knew, though he had not said so, that he wanted this job.

Thus it happened that they entered her apartment for the first time together.

"It will do," she said, and flung her hat on the dining-room table. Details of rent were settled with the manager, out of her hearing.

"I'll do what I can about the house proposition," said Roger.

He was gone. Not since her father's death had Elna felt so lonely. She lay down on the davenport, and in five minutes was fast asleep.

"I can depend upon him. He is efficient. He is free, like Father." These were her last waking thoughts.

Peace—refuge.

The words sang a refrain in Elna's ears every evening when she returned from work. Even inserting her own key in her own lock was a rite that never palled. Touching the match to the fire she had carefully laid in the morning was another rite. The fire made the room spring to life under her eyes. Then she ate a hastily constructed dinner on a card table before the fire.

Without her job she might have been lonely. But to be alone before the fire was healing to her pirit. No one could make her "live up" to anything there.

Roger Ainsworth alone knew where she lived. His visits began with the settlement of her father's estate. He performed his job well, as she had reason to know.

"Do as you like," she had said one evening, as they sipped after-dinner coffee before the fire.

"No, as you like," he answered. "I'm nothing but an adviser, you know."

"Then do it." Elna, after a fatiguing day over the microscopes, felt herself at a disadvantage, tired and cross. "You got yourself into my affairs, get yourself out if you wish."

Roger deliberately lifted the small silver coffeepot, poured a second cup of coffee, and drained it before he answered.

"The city," he said, with eyes fastened on the blue and yellow flickers of the wood fire, "will buy your old home and its grounds as a park and a permanent Jepson memorial to your father. Does that meet with your approval?"

"I think you're a bit funny—humorous, I mean, not odd." The gold flecks in Elna's dark eyes sprang to light. "I'm a little bit tired of living up to a national figure. Having my house become a public building—well, I just can't help an unbusinesslike grin at having my house sold as a civic monument. It makes me feel like the Statue of Liberty or something."

Roger watched the slow smile finally reach the corner of her sensitive lips.

"All the same, I know that it must have taken a lot of pull. Is it real?"

"I was afraid of it myself—that's why I didn't tell you sooner." Roger relaxed in his chair, lighting a cigaret. "I've just received word that the purchase has been approved by the city council. Do you like the idea?"

Elna kept her eyes carefully fixed on the fire. Roger must not see the hero worship in them. He had known exactly what to do at every point. Her hands were tight on the arms of her chair. She dared not, at the moment, venture even the two words, "Thank you." His knowledge of his own job, his quiet effectiveness, struck something deep in her that moved her far beyond speech. Oscar Jepson too had known the meaning of accomplishment, of work well done for no sake but its own.

"But why?" With a quick sidewise movement she turned in her chair and faced him.

His long, dark fingers were steady as he set down his cup. His lean face crinkled in one of its rare laughs.

"Of course, I ought to say, 'Why, what?'" he bantered, "but I won't. I think you mean, why have I taken such pains over this routine case? I might say it was because of sentiment over the friendship of your father and mine. I might say it was sympathy with a maiden in distress. I might say it was because of sheer fun in unraveling a lot of knots—that would be nearer the truth, perhaps.

"I really should like to be a better lawyer than my father, or at least as good. I'm ambitious, and getting the better of a lot of other or only half truth," he said, "exsmart alecks whets my ambition. It's worth the trouble for the satisfaction. So much worth the trouble that there won't even be a fee for it. Besides, nothing has been done without your co-operation, so perhaps I'm taking too much credit."

"No." Elna managed that much. She wanted to add, "You have been perfect in your way, as my father was perfect in his," she did not say it. Her eyelids dropped. Let him think she was merely tired. Let him not guess the hero worship which made her wonder each evening whether he might ring her bell, with papers to sign. Her face lifted, tilted chin upward in the Jepson way. The Jepsons shirked nothing. He need never know. She could manage that too.

Roger missed that upward glance. He was staring into the fire. "Most of what I said is a lie, cept possibly the last part. This place is a —well, I suppose, a haven. I don't come here merely for business—sometimes I even invent it." He flung his cigaret butt into the fire as he spoke.

"It is that to me," Elna answered quietly. "I often think of it that way."

"But you are free."

"Why, certainly!" As Elna spoke the words, they were casual. "Why not? I've been brought up that way. All the same, for the first time in my life, I'm not following in some one else's footsteps. That's something."

Roger was leaning forward, poking the fire.

"Ever met my wife?" he inquired, the poker still in his hand. His tone was carefully level. "I'd like you to," he added, still bending over the coals.

The gesture gave Elna time to think.

MRS. HAHN HELD GUILTY, MUST DIE IN CHAIR

Jury Rules Blond Poisoned Aged Ohioan; Calm While Verdict's Read.

of George Gsellman and was accused of killing two other elderly men for the same motive.

Orders 3 Verdicts.

Judge Charles S. Bell offered a choice of three verdicts: conviction without recommendation, calling for electrocution; conviction with mercy recommended, making life imprisonement mandatory; and acquittal.

Joseph H. Hoodin, chief defense counsel, sought unsuccessfully to have the court's instructions include a second degree murder verdict. Judge Bell commented:

"She either administered poison or she did not."

Judge Bell instructed the jury that state's evidence, offered to show Albert Palmer, 72, George Obendoerfer, 67, and George Gsellman, died of poison at Mrs. Hahn's hands, could be considered only to "prove the defendant's motive" or a "scheme or plan" employed by the woman.

The courtroom was packed as the case came to its climax, front seats being occupied chiefly by fashionably dressed women.

The jury received the case at 9:10 p. m. (EST) but was recalled to the courtroom an hour later. Under the close watch of bailiffs and uniformed county police, the 12 marched arm in arm to their hotel. John Granda, lone male juror, was flanked by two elderly housewives.

Mrs. Hahn, blond and Bavarian-born, was arrested Aug. 10 for questioning in connection with Colorado warrants charging the theft and pawning of diamond rings, the property of a Colorado Springs hotel-keeper.

Her arrest disclosed that she had accompanied George Obendoerfer, 67-year-old old cobbler of small means, to the resort city and that he died there, Aug. 1. She testified that she had known him only four days when they left Cincinnati in late July, although earlier she told police she met him "by chance" on the train enroute from Chicago.

Several Colorado witnesses testified for the state.

—Mrs. Hahn was indicted a week after her arrest, on charges of murder-by-poison in the deaths of Wagner and George Gsellman, Gsellman, a 67-year-old resident of Cincinnati's "over-the-Rhine German quarter, was found dead in bed on the morning of July 6.

"This is one case I'm going to beat," she remarked.

3 Bodies Exhumed.

Within a month, the bodies of three old men were dug from their graves to be analyzed for poison. Obendoerfer's viscera was taken to a Colorado Springs chemist. Poison was reported found.

A fifth character, pictured by prosecutor Dudley Miller Outcalt as "Mrs. Hahn's only living witness to her plot to slay for gain," entered the picture, with a story to Outcalt that he had become crippled permanently during an association with the woman, to whom he said he had loaned $2,000.

He was George Heis, 62-year-old former coal dealer in the Hahn neighborhood.

Heis was wheeled into the courtroom during the second week of testimony. From his improvised "witness stand," he extended crippled hands and recalled he had stretched them once before to Mrs. Hahn with the accusation "you did this to me."

Two weeks before, Outcalt had ordered the body of Wagner exhumed for chemical analysis. In quick succession, Gsellman's body and that of 72-year-old Albert Palmer—who Mrs. Hahn said she met in a book-making establishment—were dug up. Palmer died March 26.

96 Testify For State.

Outcalt summoned 96 witnesses in support of his contention that "this woman killed so many people there isn't another human being like her on the face of the earth."

The defense relied upon only three—Mrs. Hahn, her 12-year-old son, Oscar, and Dr. William McNally, Chicago toxicolgist.

DINOSAUR CLUE

Pre-Historic Animal's Step In Bog Leads To Discovery.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Eighty million years ago a dinosaur stepped in a peat bog in what is now Colorado, leaving for science the first accurate stride measurements of the pre-historic behemoth.

That stride, said Dr. Barnum Brown of the American Museum of natural history, was 15 feet, indicating the animal was 35 feet tall.

Dr. Brown, returning today from the west after his most successful season in 40 years, said the three-toed creature had 34-inch paws.

SEVEN HURT AS CAR OVERTURNS

Wittenberg Students Victims of Traffic Accident Near Hayesville.

Seven Wittenberg college students were injured, one seriously, when the car in which they were riding turned over on route 30 south of Hayesville at 5:30 p. m. Friday.

Two of the students are confined to General hospital where their condition this morning was reported as good. Those in the hospital are Miss Helen Trezlow, 17, of Bedford, suffering with head injuries and possible concussion, and Michael Ondov, 24, of Lakewood, suffering with a fractured back. Miss Trezlow was expected to be released from the hospital today.

Others injured in the accident and treated at the hospital for their injuries were Robert Angus, 19, of Cleveland, who suffered cuts about the right eye and on both knees; Gordon Slusser, 19, of Van Wert, fractured collarbone; Gaylord Gourley, 23, Youngstown, right elbow injuries; Richard Brandt, 22, Cleveland, possible back injuries, and Ted Benko, 19, of Cleveland, driver of the car, who suffered lacerations about the face and right hand.

Benko told State Highway Patrolman R. L. Doebel that the right front wheel struck a stone, causing the car to turn over several times, demolishing the machine.

The students were returning to their homes for the week-end when the accident occurred.

LOYALISTS BOMB FASCIST LINES

40 Planes Swoop Down On Heart of Insurgent Offensive.

HENDAYE, FRANCO-SPANISH FRONTIER —(AP)— Forty fast warplanes were reported today to have struck at Zaragoza, the heart of the insurgent offensive in northeastern Spain.

Government reports said bombs caused terrific explosions and fires and had crashed into a large munitions depot at Zaragoza, headquarters of the insurgent forces now strategically massed to smash into government Spain.

In yesterday's aerial combat insurgents raided supply stations at Barbastro, a key government defense position, east of the insurgent headquarters, and the Catalan village of San Felix De Guixolos.

CHECKS BOUNCE

So County Treasury Has To Pay $1,000 In Tax Accounts.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Examiner Fred C. Stiles reported to the state inspection bureau today a deficit of $1,387 in the accounts of Hammond Barton, treasurer of Washington county, all of which has been paid.

Most of the deficit had been caused, the examiner said, by Barton accepting checks in payment for taxes and holding them until the taxpayers could make them good. Some of the checks, however, never were made good.

MART LEADERS TILT BACKWARD IN EARLY HOURS

Analysts Hunting New Signs of Definite Turn In Recent Price Collapse.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Leading stocks tilted backward in today's market, many yielding factions to a point or more.

Trade news continued spotty as analysts hunted for signs of a definite turning point in the recent downtrend.

Reports from automotive centers indicated that, while no general price cuts were likely on new models because of consumer resistance, some thought was being given to a readjustment of trade-in values to offset increases announced in the fall.

Production schedules of farm implement makers were said to have been stepped up due to the fact the slump in steel mill operations enables manufacturers to get prompter delivery on requirements. Demand for smaller tractors and tools was understood to be currently at a high level.

Railroads Point to Need for $508,000,000 Income Increase.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Executives of the nation's class one railroad told the Interstate commerce commission today their lines need $508,000,000 more income to meet increased payrolls, taxes and supplies.

The margin between income and operating expenses has been squeezed so thin, they said in a petition to boost freight rates and passenger fares, that rail systems face a crisis.

They asked for a flat increase of 15 per cent of freight rates and an increase in passenger fares in eastern territory from 2 to 2½ cents a mile.

TALKS TO KING, DELAYS VISIT

Duke, Royal Brother Feared Anti-U. S. Sentiment Among British, Claim.

seeme dto have no idea what his next move would be to occupy his restless mind. But they said he had abandoned any idea of an early visit to the United States; that his decision was actually not a postponement but an abandonment.

This, however, was the first reaction and the feeling presisted that later the duke again—in entirely different circumstances—would go through with his idea of taking his American born duchess back to the United States, to remain for several months. If and when he went, it was believed, it would be when he was assured that he would be welcome and would not be involved in political disputes.

All day yesterday the duke reading cablegrams and listening to telephone calls about the criticism roused in the United States over sponsorship of his intended visit by the industrial engineer, Charles E. Bedaux, stuck to his plans for his tour. As late as 8:40 last night, a spokesman took occasion to repeat he intended to go. Then 90 minutes later, in the Duke's suite at the Hote Meurice, the postponement of his visit was announced:

"It is announced tonight on behalf of the Duke of Windson that he has decided to postpone his visit to America.

"His royal highness arrived at this dicision with great reluctance and after much deliberation, but he feels that owing to the grave mis-conceptions which have arisen and the mis-statements which appeared regarding the motives and purposes of his industrial tour there is no alternative but to defer it for the present.

"The duke emphatically repeats that there is no shadow of justification for any suggestion that he is allied in any industrial system or that he is for or against any political or racial doctrine. He expresses earnest hope that after this announcement his real and sincere motive for his proposed visit to America will be properly understood.

"His Royal Highness will personally convey his thanks to those industrial companies who so generously extended invitations to him and to all who have assisted in arrangements."

It was noted that the duke made no reference at all to the duchess, and that he left open the way for a visit in future.

It was understood that after the announcement, the duke cabled regrets to President Roosevelt and expressed hope he might be able to visit the United States in future.

Slaughter of 1,000 Brings Crisis on Isle of Haiti

Not That It Matters

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THE TIME is not far distant when the thinking American public will demand universal use of the Massachusetts ballot for all elections, thus doing away with the evils of "straight tickets" votes.

There is little to be said for the present ticket with its political emblems, except that it provides an easy way out for the voter who can just barely read and write, and who votes as he is told. Intelligent voters will know their candidates and vote accordingly without having them lined up in Republican and Democratic rows, like tin soldiers in a box.

The greatest evil of the "straight ticket" vote is that tried and capable officials who have served city, state or nation well, go down to defeat in a landslide when the public is fed up with the heads of an administration.

On the Massachusetts ballot the office is listed and candidates immediately under it, so that the voter must place an X before the name of each candidate for whom he wishes to vote. There is nothing to designate the man's politics, just as Ohio lists its judicial and other non-partisan tickets.

Political analysists say that there is more intelligent voting on non-partisan tickets than any other. The reason is not difficult to guess.

IF THE citizens who voted against the playground levy because they couldn't spare ten cents on a thousand dollars to provide supervised outdoor recreation for thousands of children, had seen the picture "Dead End" in time, they might have changed their vote. It showed what happens to boys who have no place to congregate except the dark alleys and crannies of a city; who never have an opportunity to play ball or leap frog; who find outlet for their pent up energies in general orneryness, which, like bad pennies, always comes home to the city that fostered it.

CONVENTION Reflections: Alice Hughes, N' York columnist, speaking at the noos-pepper women's convention last week end, said that the modern business woman, clear of eye, decisive of manner, independent, aggresive, and capable, is the "woman without charm," while the lydy wot stays home, pretties up her face, plays cards in the afternoon, accepts her husband's word for everything, doesn't argue and must be taken care of, is the essence of charm. Mebbe so, mebbe so. S'matter of opinion. . . .

Alice Roosevelt Longworth, with steel grey hair that seems to perfectly match her steel blue eyes, couldn't be budged from her no-public-speeches policy, but mirthfully admitted she was the only non-talking member of the Talking Roosevelt family.

Was so thrilled when Phyllis Oster's News-Journal society page of the past year merited an honorable mention for one of the best in the state for papers under 25,000 circulation. It's a tough contest with many entries and it's something to get even in the honorable mention class . . .

RIVER DOWNS, the swank race track and club near Cincinnati, which has been rebuilt since the flood, is so attractive. Sitting in the club house or the grand stand, spectators can see the slow, smooth waters of the Ohio, with the hills of Kentucky beyond. Under a bright October sun the river was deceptively gentle and lazy and sweet-tempered, and gave no indication that under the lash of spring and autumn rains she can be an old rip, sweeping out destructively and maliciously over those pastoral valleys and low, brown hills.

Enjoyed the races and the bit of legitimate gambling that went with them—legitimate in Ohio, anyway. Got a little nervous as the time approached for me to hang a wreath around the neck of the winner in the Newspaper Women's handicap. George Blecker, chairman of the Ohio Racing Commission, who was at the track, assured me that horses have a natural antipathy for ladies of the press and probably would bite my hand off.

But it didn't; and I found it was a lot of fun, after 18 years of making pretty speeches to horses' necks, to actually pin a bouquet on one.

NOTES On The Cuff: The oldster who wonders what has become of the old fashioned coal scuttle can find the answer in this season's hats for women . . . The present day telephone system will never approach perfection until automatic shut-offs operate at the end of every five minute conversation. . . The Baltimore Federation of Labor has been successful in its efforts to keep the Duke and Duchess of Windsor away from America. One wonders a bit wearily why the heck these over-zealous groups don't 'tend to their own knittin' and keep their noses out of affairs that are none of their business. It is just possible they'd get farther with their own work if they did. To the unbiased observer it seems as if they merely want to fight and don't give a damn what it's about. . . . The new picture at the top of the column is the result of protests at the old one which said, variously, to be too dignified, matronly, serious, sad and sweet! All of which, said they, I am not. But we'll keep it, and when a sad and serious col-yum is written, we'll dust it off and use it. Pictures to suit the theme, as it were . . .

A. F. of L., CIO Agree on Formula for Truce

TRADE DIVISION FIRST STEP IN PEACE PROGRAM

Conferees Consider Plan to Split Jurisdiction Over Certain Labor Groups.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— The American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization considered a tentative division of the labor field today to facilitate a truce in their two-year dispute.

CIO Chairman John L. Lewis and Federation President William Green scheduled personal conferences with officials of their respective groups to discuss possible approval of an agreement to split up organization activities.

An experimental formula for a division of jurisdiction was worked out yesterday at a joint conference of peace committees. The conferees then adjourned until 2 p. m. Monday.

Work On Armistice.

It was learned that the committees had agreed to work out a plan for operating an armistice rather than establishing the truce first. Leaders explained that an effective truce could not be agreed upon until a method of putting it into action had been decided.

Reliable sources reported that the formula embraced the following:

1. The federation would be asked to grant full jurisdiction to the CIO in the rubber, newspaper, maritime, fur, steel, coal and certain other industries.

2. The CIO would be asked to grant complete jurisdiction to the federation in the building trades, engraving and particularized craft industries.

3. Compromises would be worked out in fields where each group has strong unions.

Spokesmen for both sides emphasized that no agreement had been reached yet on this plan and that considerable discussion might precede final action.

Each faction was hopeful, however, that a settlement might be worked out and that once such agreement had been ratified by the negotiating committees, additional impetus would be given to the move for a formal treaty of peace.

Up and Down THE STREET

Paul Sullivan, the WLW news broadcaster, who concludes his nightly reports with "so it's goodnight and thirty," puzzles a number of Mansfield radio listeners with the use of the word "thirty," frequent telephone calls to The News-Journal indicate. For their information "thirty" in newspaper parlance denotes the end of a story or in some instances the last story of an edition.

A Hancock Heights resident protests the paragraph in this column several days ago in which mention was made of the old gentleman who took his teeth out on the street and adjusted them more comfortably. That gesture, he says, is no funnier than when a girl stops, takes out a compact, powders her nose and uses her lipstick on the street. Technically, the H. MASS KILLINGS CAUSE ALARM IN WASHINGTON

U. S. Minister Ordered Back to Post as Dominician Troops Stage Revolt.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—A crisis on the island of Haiti appeared imminent today as reports of Dominican Republic troops massing along the Haitian border forced U. S. Minister Henry Norweb to abandon the internationad radio conference at Havana, Cuba, and prepare to return to his post immediately.

The administration's order for Norweb to leave at once for the Dominican Republic gave credence to reports that President General Trujillo's soldiers of the Dominican side of the island, shared by the two countries, had slaughtered 1,000 Haitians near the border early in October.

Norweb is scheduled to catch the first available plane Sunday.

Confirms Massacre.

In New York Haitian Foreign Minister Georges Leger, confirmed United Press dispatches from Santiago, Cuba, reporting the slaughter. He will come to Washington Monday and is scheduled to confer Tuesday with President Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Wells, the United Press learned.

Developments during the last 24 hours appeared to substantiate reports that have been circulating in diplomatic quarters without official confirmation for several weeks — that there had been massacres on the Haitian Dominican border and that tension in both countries was increasing.

Because of the remoteness of the district where the massacre occurred, news of it was slow in reaching Haitian government officials at Port au Prince.

Likewise only fragmentary and unofficial reports have been received here. The United Press dispatch was carried to Cuba by J. H. Elias, Brazilian consular agent in Haiti.

Unsatisfactory economic conditions in Haiti was the reason given as the cause of the massacre. Because of the overcrowded condition of Haiti, thousands of natives were reported to have crossed the Dominican border and taken jobs at extremely low wages. This reputedly caused resentment among Dominicans who sought higher wage levels and the ensuing slaughter of the immigrants.

4 PLEAD GUILTY TO DOPE COUNTS

by Chief of Police Meade K. Bates that at least one of the four had been selling the cigarets.

Bates was called into the courtroom to explain his charges but declined to name specific instances in which sales were made when questioned by Atty J. V. Will, counsel for the four.

Judge Huston indicated that if any members of the group should be convicted of selling narcotics he would give them the maximum sentence.

"There will be no probation in the event of conviction for selling," he asserted.

Other cases continued were those involving Pose Wade, Shelby, indicted for second degree manslaughter in the traffic death of his son several weeks ago, and H. J. LaBarge, accused of cutting with intent to wound his wife, Bessie, in a domestic quarrel at Shelby six weeks ago.

Arraigned on an indictment charging her with cutting with intent to wound, Laura Ramsey, colored, withheld her plea and asked for the appointment of council.

Richard Redding, of Shelby, pleaded guilty to indictments for burglary and operating an automobile without the owner's consent. Sentence was withheld to permit further investigation of Redding's record.

On his plea of guilty to assault and battery, John Oney, of Shiloh, was placed on probation for three years and told that he would get a six months workhouse sentence if he became intoxicated within that period.

The case of James Furness, 17, who pleaded guilty to an indictment for operating a car without the owner's consent, was transferred to juvenile court because of the defendant's age.

Pleas of guilty were entered by James Thompson, who was indicted on a non-support count, and Wilbur Gruver, accused of automobile theft. Both cases were continued however, with Thompson's set for Friday and Gruver's sentence due Wednesday.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

Many of Hollywood's historic film hits—"The Covered Wagon," "The Iron Horse" and "The Plainsman"—were glorified "westerns." Once again the movie-makers are pouring millions into outdoor epics, because "Gold Is Where You Find It"—to quote a title—and Hollywood always has found box-office power in the man-girl-horse formula, especially when it's built on history and a million-dollar budget.

THE GREAT OPEN SPACES

Plenty of manpower is necessary on a down-grade roll to slow this heavy camera car to the gait at which a cavalcade of stage coaches and express wagons moves for a scene in "Wells Fargo."

LOVE ON HORSEBACK

Olivia de Havilland and George Brent provide the heart interest in "Gold Is Where You Find It."

BAD MAN

Wallace Beery is again a leering two-gun man in "Bad Man of Brimstone," a new western.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1937.

Drive carefully tomorrow—this year's quota of traffic fatalities has already been reached.

There's just a chance that the "missing link" is so commonly encountered that it escapes notice.

Toledo has ruled against a hooded parade by the Ku Klux Klan—despite the fact that they seem so much more "equal" that way.

Repel Attempted 'Seizure.'

SOMETHING that apparently has not been realized by the John L. Lewis style of labor leadership was clearly demonstrated at last Tuesday's elections in Detroit, Akron, and several other cities in which avowed CIO mayoralty candidates met overwhelming defeat.

Except as it may be done by various minority groups from time to time, there is no inclination in America to encourage class distinctions. This is especially true in matters having to do with the operation of government, and when the CIO announced, during the campaign, that it planned to "seize the reins of government in Detroit" its candidates were naturally doomed to deserved failure.

The skilled labor which can qualify for union membership constitutes such a small percentage of total labor requirements in the United States, that it can ill afford to take the appearance of aligning itself against majority opinion, either in the matter of conduct or in tests of strength at the polls.

Majority sentiment in this country has long been favorable to the cause of labor, and has viewed with gratification the advance strides that have been made under sound leadership.

This will continue to be the public attitude toward labor—unless labor leadership directs along a course that runs counter to majority views.

Liquor Selling to School Children.

EVEN so large a city as Cleveland is beginning to realize that the liquor business cannot safely be depended upon to do its own policing and that some bounds must be fixed beyond which liquor dispensers must not be permitted to go.

In connection with revocation of several licenses, for law violations, the state board of liquor control has announced that an investigation will be started in Cleveland to determine whether beer, wine and liquor establishments near school buildings have been catering to pupils.

The interesting question arises, in this connection, as to just how far a liquor establishment must be from a school building to be permitted to cater to children. In Mansfield it seemed quite possible, recently, for a 14-year-old girl to find a place to buy beer—and other children, around 15 or 16 years old, appear to encounter no difficulty in "liquoring-up" during the night season.

After the proposed Cleveland investigation has been completed it might be well to have something of the same sort in Mansfield—with revocation of licenses in cases of persons who have shown that they cannot be safely trusted with such heavy responsibility as is involved in the dispensing of intoxicants.

Big Market for Electric Refrigerators.

PREDICTION by A. E. Allen, vice president of Westinghouse, that total sales of electric refrigerators of all kinds during the next year will hit the two and a half million mark, may surprise some people who have paid no particular attention to the rapid strides being made in this branch of the electrical industry.

Electric refrigeration, an innovation of recent years, came into such quick vogue as to pass rapidly from the luxury to the necessity class of household conveniences.

With more general recognition of the advantages and economy of year-round refrigeration, coupled with more widespread availability of electric current, there has been a steadily increasing market for electric refrigerators, until now no modern home is considered complete without one.

Mr. Allen's prediction for next year's business does not appear over-optimistic—and it is gratifying to know that Westinghouse production will account for a considerable percentage of the total, with consequent large benefits to Mansfield.

College Diploma, Help or Hindrance?

THERE has been considerable discussion, during the past few years, as to whether a college education is an advantage when it comes to getting a job.

In a recent report of employment of college graduates, issued by the University of Buffalo, the conclusion is reached that it is becoming more and more difficult for college graduates to "sell themselves" to prospective employers.

Here, again, it seems to be a matter of the individual rather than the group. The attitude of some college graduates—with inflated ideas of their own importance—may reflect unfairly on others who realize that they have yet to gain the training and experience that will later make their services of real value to an employer.

There is, for instance, the ludicrous notion of a youth just out of college, who, in applying for a job, appended to his letter, "Not interested in anything paying less than $5,000 a year."

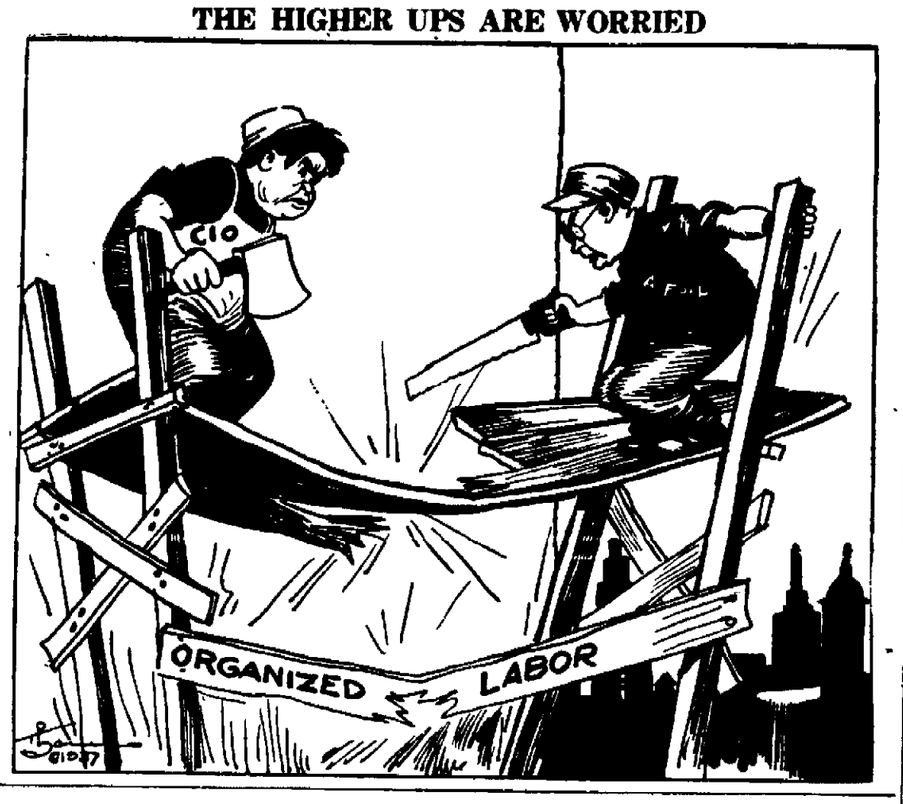
Employers have found by experience that a college degree is no guarantee of capability and their interest lies in having the work done satisfactorily, without regard to whether or not the worker is a college graduate.

Blessed with a reasonable amount of common sense, a college graduate has a better chance of eventually succeeding than has a person with less formal education—but without common sense a college graduate can be just as big a flop as anyone else.

Farmers' Progress.

FARMERS are not doing so badly now. Crops are good and prices are good. Their indebtedness was reduced from a total of $9,214,000,000 in 1929 to $7,645,000,000 in 1935, and by this time nearly one-fourth of the debts owed before the depression must have been cleaned up. Many farmers, unfortunately, have been sold out; but those left are better off statistically, at least, with the biggest purchasing and debt-paying power they have had in many years.

THE HIGHER UPS ARE WORRIED



Future Dark For Holding Companies, Belief

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Public utilities of this country are holding back expenditures of one billion dollars a year for improvements and expansions, the Securities and Exchange Commission has informed President Roosevelt, waiting until the way for new financing can be cleared, as they view it, by the Supreme Court ruling that the holding company death sentence is unconstitutional.

This holding back, the president is informed, has been going on for three years. The president just might have thought that these figures, coming from a commission which has had so little chance to function since it was organized because there have been so few new security issues, was an exaggeration. But within a few days after this allegation the utilities executives themselves tried to use the same argument to prove to the public that the president's utility policy is all wet. They quoted the Edison Electric Institute to the effect that there was a "construction deficit of $2,600,000,000 accumulated in the past five years."

It was added that the ten-year average of new construction by the utilities from 1923 to 1932 inclusive was $752,215,0000 annually. What makes this particularly significant is that it includes the period from 1929 to 1932, the last two of which were very bad indeed.

So much so that if these years are left out of the calculation there does not seem to be such a wide discrepancy between the figures given the president by S. E. C. and those supplied by the Edison Institute. Or if the fact that the piled up need, so to speak, is all the greater because of those famine years, is added.

OF course the utility executives cite these figures to prove that President Roosevelt's anti-utility policy, his policy of putting the government into competition with the privately owned utilities, is actually holding back prosperity, is retarding employment, is depriving both local and federal governments of an increase in the tax base. But the president sees it very differently.

He not only believes, but has been assured by S. E. C. officials and others, that it is not the operating utility men who are responsible for the log jam, but the higher-ups in the holding companies. So his anger at the holding companies is merely augmented. In fact, names have been quoted to the president of officials operating privately owned electric companies who would be delighted to expand. Names of holding company officials who have vetoed the expansion have also been supplied him.

All of which is rather interesting to the bystander because it seems to him that the holding company executives are sacrificing their all to defend a city which has already been doomed by a flank attack. There may be some senator or representative in Washington who believes that the holding companies, whether they be of the public utility or investment trust or whatever nature, will be able to survive the present trend in taxation, but this writer has not encountered one.

THE answer is simple. Up to last year dividends were exempt from the normal income tax—on the theory that the corporation paying them had already given the federal government 15 per cent of its net earnings. Moreover, corporations did not have to pay the full corporation income tax on dividends received from other corporations, for the same reason. This was patterned after the British tax law, which the United States more or less copied.

But now there is no such exemption. Moreover, the probability is that the corporation income tax will be increased. So there does not seem to be much future for the holding company as it moves down this tax chiseling line. It seems headed for extinction.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Why Is a "Cat"?

I USED to duck when I saw Nita coming.

Nita's one of those people who can make you feel like thirty cents without saying a word . . . just a smile, an uplifted eyebrow, a snooty laugh, and away goes anybody's reputation. The Perfect Cat—that's Nita. Always Belittlin'.

So—as I said—I used to duck when I saw Nita coming. Some people know how to handle gals like that. Know how to give them what's coming to them. Think up Just The Right Word on the Spot. But me—anyone can get my goat. I never know that I've been insulted until the next day. And as for these Cutting Come-Backs . . . I dope 'em out about four hours too late.

So, naturally, I was Nita's pet dish. What that girl could do to me, without half trying, was a crime. Showing me up was her favorite indoor sport.

And then one day I discovered How Nita Got That Way—and I've never been afraid of her since.

How'd I discover it? Just by reading a book. One of those psychological things. But it certainly gave me the low-down on Nita and all her tribes.

Before this I'd had the usual notions about Cats . . . male or female. I thought that they were that way because they were born sour . . . or had a dirty wallop somewhere along the line. So now they were spoiling for a fight. Looking for a chance to get hunk with the whole human race. Trying to take the joy out of life generally.

But I was wrong. Cats aren't fighters. Cats are cowards.

Catty people are frightened people. Humiliated people. Something in their lives—perhaps in their chemical makeup—has made them feel small, inferior . . . cheated and put-upon. And constantly they are beset with an inner itch to prove that they have the goods . . . to put themselves over in a big way.

Why does a Cat try to make you feel small?

SO HE CAN LOOK BIG . . . WISE . . . STRONG . . . CLEVER.

As a dying man thirsts for water, as a starving man yearns for food, so a Cat longs for importance, for power.

Behind those envious eyes, that malicious tongue, is LIFE . . . LIFE SCREAMING IN ITS EXASPERATION . . . BOBBING IN ITS SELF-PITY . . . FIGHTING FOR A CHANCE TO ASSERT ITSELF.

Once I thought that a Cat was the most hateful creature on earth.

Now I know that he or she is the most pitiful.

You've had a Cat in your life—yes? We all have.

Then stop fearing that Cat. Stop hating and avoiding her, or him.

UNDERSTAND, INSTEAD. PITY, INSTEAD. TRY LOVE, INSTEAD OF LOATHING . . . FRIENDLINESS, INSTEAD OF REVENGE.

Is that guaranteed to turn a Cat into a Regular Guy? No, it isn't. Sometimes a spirit is too twisted for any human help to set it right. But your new attitude will do this for YOU. It will move a No. 1 Source of Spite from your own life . . . it will ease you of endless fear and resentment.

It may even keep you from being a Cat yourself!

Timely Editorial

Omaha's Trailer Test.

From Omaha comes the first news of conflict over the increasingly vexing question of trailer colonies, involving the status of the homes-on-wheels when they are used as permanent or semi-permanent places of residence.

Thirteen families who had parked their trailers for the winter in downtown areas were ordered to move their portable dwellings within 48 hours because they had inadequate sanitary equipment and constituted in the view of the authorities, "a menace to public health." The tenants of the trailers are reported defiant and determined to put up a fight before complying.

This problem is one which most cities of any size will have to cope with at some time in the future.

The view is growing that a trailer is what the name implies—a mobile living unit whose place is on the highway, or if parked for extended periods, in a place provided especially for trailers, preferably on the outskirts of cities where there will be no conflict with sanitary regulations.—Columbus Dispatch.

Founder of the News Honored

William S. Cappeller Commemorated By Election To Ohio Journalism's Hall of Fame

Election of William S. Cappeller, founder of The Mansfield News, to Ohio journalism's Hall of Fame, serves to perpetuate in Ohio newspaper history the name of a man who, from 1885 until his death in 1911, was an outstanding figure in Mansfield and who also performed valuable service to the newspaper profession in this state.

In the ten years since Ohio journalism's Hall of Fame was instituted, under sponsorship of the Ohio State university, this honor has been bestowed upon 31 earlier newspaper men, including Mr. Cappeller and John M. Amos, former publisher of the Cambridge Jeffersonian, whose names were added to the roster at the annual Hall of Fame dinner-meeting held last night at the Faculty club, Ohio State university campus.

WILLIAM S. CAPPELLER

EVERY present-day city that has grown and prospered from a small beginning finds in its records, and in the memory of its older residents, the names of a few men of an earlier period who are remembered as having played a large part in providing the energy, determination, courage and vision required to serve the community of their time and to give inspiration to their associates, as well as to those of later generations.

The twenty-six years that have elapsed since the death of William S. Cappeller—now honored by acceptance into Ohio Journalism's Hall of Fame—have served only to emphasize the lasting value of his contribution to the Mansfield of today, by his devoted public service as founder and long-time publisher of The News, Mansfield's first permanent daily newspaper.

It is fortunate, too, that Mr. Cappeller's scope of influence was not confined to his home city of Mansfield, and that his keen insight, great energy and exceptional qualifications for sound leadership found opportunity to function in ways that proved beneficial to many other Ohio publishers and carried to them some of the abundant enthusiasm with which he was performing his task in Mansfield.

It was in 1886, a year after he had founded The Mansfield News, that Mr. Cappeller headed a call for organization of the Ohio Associated Dailies, of which organization he served as president for several years and in which he continued an active interest through a quarter of a century.

He was also energetic in the affairs of the National Editorial association, of which he was president in 1892 and 1893, in which time he participated, with George W. Childs, in the opening exercises of the Childs-Drexel Printers' Home at Colorado Springs.

The Buckeye Press association was also among the newspaper organizations in which Mr. Cappeller held membership, and a keen regret of his final year of life was that he was unable to attend the sessions of an annual convention of the Buckeye Press which he had been instrumental in bringing to Mansfield.

In naming a child, parents sometimes make a choice which they fondly hope may prove an inspiration toward later worthy accomplishments.

Some such thought may have been in the minds of William and Mary Cappeller, in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, on February 23, 1839, when their only child was born. He was named William Shakespeare Cappeller—and although few in Mansfield ever knew of that middle name, who can say but that it may have played a considerable part in awakening boyhood aspirations and stirring the imagination of the man who later achieved so greatly in varied fields of endeavor and who made a lasting impress upon his community and upon Ohio journalism.

It was when William was nine years old that the family moved from Pennsylvania to the farther west Indiana, as was common to that time, and located on a little farm near Richmond. Influence toward later development of an ardent interest in politics and government is seen in the fact that William's father, an eloquent speaker in both English and German, participated actively, throughout Indiana, in the presidential campaign of 1852.

It was in the winter of that same year, however, that the father died and 13-year-old William was left as the mainstay of his widowed mother in operating the farm.

Working thus through spring and summer, the boy was enabled to go to school in the winter and to attend the lyceums and debates which provided opportunity for the training and experience in public speaking which he was able to use so effectively in later years.

His first smell of printer's ink, while still in his teens, was gained as an apprentice in the office of the Richmond Palladium, but within a few months he was enabled to gratify an ambition to secure more schooling and entered Farmers' college, Cincinnati always encouraged by his mother, to whom he attributed much of his later success in life.

A VARIETY of activities bridged the years before Mr. Cappeller was to come to Mansfield to establish The News, but it was the incident of his early association with a pioneering venture in the making of stereotype plates for use of newspapers in small cities and towns, that appears to have led him inevitably into the city where he was destined to fit so admirably and to achieve so notably.

Before this point was reached, however, Mr. Cappeller engaged for a time in business in Mt. Healthy, Hamilton county, and in 1866 was appointed postmaster of that town, meanwhile studying law and qualifying for admission to the bar.

In 1871 he was appointed on a committee to investigate charges of mismanagement and corruption, brought against Hamilton county officials—which led to an amendment of the state laws pertaining to compensation of county officials and known as the "Hamilton county fee bill."

Recognition of Mr. Cappeller's capable work on this committee resulted in his appointment to a clerkship in the county auditor's office and his later election for two terms as auditor of Hamilton county.

It was shortly after his retirement from this office that Mr. Cappeller became interested in the making of stereotype plates—an enterprise which afterward merged into the American Press association, with which his connection as a stockholder continued for many years.

BUT it was to the field of newspaper publication that W. S. Cappeller was most strongly attracted, and it was with unerring vision that he recognized Mansfield, then around 10,000 in population, as a city in the geographical location and with the character of citizenship that inspired confidence of future growth and to which his energy and talents might well be devoted.

So it came about that on March 7, 1885, there appeared the first issue of The Mansfield News, a newspaper that has continued without interruption of week-day publication from that day to this, and retaining the name that Mr. Cappeller gave it, save only that it is now The News-Journal, in recognition of a consolidation that became effective five years ago when The News was purchased by The Journal, which was established in 1930, nine years after The News had passed from Cappeller family ownership.

Some will recall that at the same time The News was engaged in its early struggles in Mansfield a similar scene was being enacted in the neighboring city of Marion, where the youthful Warren G. Harding had just bought The Star, for $400 in borrowed money, and where he was required to work desperately for a time to make ends meet.

It was during those crucial years that a strong personal, business and political friendship developed between W. S. Cappeller and the considerably younger W. G. Harding—a friendship that carried on through the strangely parallel courses of growth of the two newspapers, and of the cities to which each rendered faithful service.

* * *

THAT W. S. Cappeller served for several years as chairman of the state Republican committee; that he was honored by election as grand master of the Ohio Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, and also took an active interest in the Elk lodge; that he served two terms as postmaster of Mansfield and was president of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce—all of these things are merely incidental to better understanding of the vast range of physical strength and mental resources which this man possessed and upon which he drew freely and gladly in making his contribution to his time.

If one word may be chosen to express W. S. Cappeller, that word is "Loyalty," and in it is encompassed a galaxy of human virtues such as won for the faithful servant in the Parable of the Talents: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things. I will make thee ruler over many things."

Those who were privileged to be associated with him in producing The News, and others who had opportunity to know him well, inclined naturally to give the same loyalty in return, and it may be said, in passing, that much of the disturbed employer-employe relationships which appear in industry and business from time to time might be avoided if policies similar to those of W. S. Cappeller were more generally in vogue.

It would be remiss, in a sketch such as this, to omit mention of the late Stokes Hiestand, who served as editor of The News from its first issue until the death of Mr. Cappeller on November 1, 1911—and then for an additional ten years until The News passed from the Cappeller family ownership.

These two, "Cap" and "Stokes," understood each other completely and were happily associated in the common purpose of making the best newspaper possible—and of broadly visioning the advancement of their community as their primary objective.

"I want The News to be for Mansfield all the time," was a favorite expression of W. S. "then I am not afraid but that Mansfield will be for The News."

THINKING back over a number of years of association with Mr. Cappeller, and fully appreciative of his many fine qualities, my most vivid recollections center around incidents which showed his consistent friendliness for those in his employ, in every department, and their resultant friendliness toward him. It was in this spirit that he was always ready to offer helpful suggestions to young people coming into the employ of the paper—attempting to instil in their minds those qualifications for successful newspaper work which his own experience and observation had taught him were essential.

An incident that I recall as typical of his attitude toward employes, occurred one morning in the business office, when, as a young reporter, I was standing at the desk talking with Mr. Cappeller. A lawyer who came in remarked, "Well, W. S., issuing your orders?"

Instantly, and rather tartly, came the response, "We don't issue orders here—we make suggestions."

* * *

It may be doubted if men and women, during their own lifetime, can perform a finer, or a more lasting service, than that of contributing, by precept and example, to the encouragement and training of younger men and women who must later be prepared to take on larger responsibilities. Thus are the benefits of a life projected far beyond the confines of its own years and made to serve future generations in the slow progress of mankind toward a higher civilization.

* * *

It is with the sincere belief that William S. Cappeller thus served, that we join in commemorating his life and works by adding his name to the roster in Ohio journalism's Hall of Fame.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

DAY is breaking after one of those stormy nights I love so well. Zig-zags of brilliant lightning, crashes of thunder and rain in buckets. Out the window all the universe seems refreshed, buoyant and glistering, in the half light of morning.

Many sing the praises of India for its various mysteries. Its appeal to me is in its monsoons. No phenomenon has the wallop of dry earth soaking up a downpour and burgeoning into lovely bloom. The chief charm of Paris is in those sudden flurries that make every Frenchman an umbrella carrier.

Often I have swum up from sound sleep, sluggish and weary with the gravity of affairs; heard the patter of rain and felt like kicking off the covers and indulging in a capriole. There is an after-rain fragrance, even among the man-made cliffs, that chirks the spirits.

Snow has almost—but not quite—the emotional tug of rain for me. The picture I enjoy most in my meager collection is a Virginia snow scene by Percy Crosby. It's fun to get up early this way now and then and beat the barrier with a column. The early riser always interests me. Because I am a late sleeper as a rule, he seems from another world. I am the laggard of an early rising family. My father was always up at 5 a. m., a habit he could not break even after he retired. My grandfathers arose at 4 a. m.

Caught in a mistral while motoring, we were once forced to spend the night at a farmhouse near the French border, in San Sebastian, Spain. My gnarled host asked what time he should awaken us and it was suggested we would be ready any time he had breakfast. Before daylight he knocked and brought in a tray of steaming and fiery fumadoes, filled with hot and burning native spices. It was a dish with the stimulating qualities of a triple brandy on an empty stomach. He said he had been up awhile but decided to let us sleep a little late.

I like to think of the sun as the eye of day. And somewhat like the eyes of man. Sometimes bright and sometimes bleary. We wonder in the calm of this day-break how many men shuffle in a few hours toward the cool tap and a long draught, mumbling "Never again!" A glance out the window reveals the earliest riser of the neighborhood. A jauntily dressed fellow followed by page boys who deposit a pile of blond luggage at the curb and a taxi chugs up. Catching a train, no doubt.

We went to see Gertrude Lawrence for the second time last night. She is one of the few actresses I just like to watch. Especially when she indulges one of those shimmery moods as unpredictable as a humming bird's flight. Not a great actress, in the manner of Katharine Cornell, but one perhaps with the most distinct following in the American theater. No longer a vogue, but an institution. That was a surprising lot of talent Andre Charlot shipped from England 15 years ago, then unknown, but now look! Miss Lawrence, Noel Coward, Jack Buchanan and Beatrice Lillie. And not one completely absorbed by Hollywood. We hear a pleasant rustle in the kitchen. The dog ambles in, indulges a series of stretches and cocks his head quizzically, as much as to say: "What in the world are you doing around at this hour?"
